WHAT IS THE SARDINE RUN?

SARDINE RUN

The annual migration of sardines up the eastern coast of South Africa is an event no one wants to miss. From May through July, shoals of sardines follow cold, nutrient-rich currents that sweep in-shore up the east coast due to changes in weather patterns. Along with these sardines comes a vast array of hungry marine predators such as Cape gannets, superpods of common dolphins, brydes whales, and several shark species (dusky sharks, copper sharks, black tip sharks, ragged tooth sharks, bull sharks, and more).

Aside from the incredible shoals of sardines, there is also the annual migration of humpback whales traveling north where they will mate or give birth. They can be seen daily in small family groups.

The sardine run is unpredictable - making it the most exciting way to spend a day at sea. You just never know what you will witness next.

BBC recognises this event as 'the greatest shoal on Earth', and we couldn't agree more. Whether you are a certified or non-certified diver, this experience is for you. All ocean lovers and conservationists will thoroughly enjoy this spectacular marine event.

CINTSA, WILD COAST

WHY CINTSA?

The best way to explain this is by describing the sardines' migration patterns. The sardines follow a cold current that sweeps up the coast, funneling shoals inland. Cintsa is located near the start of this funnel, meaning the shoals pass through here first on their way to the spawning regions in KwaZulu-Natal. As a result, the shoals are often at their largest in Cintsa, before many predators have had their fill.

Cintsa is renowned for its scenic beauty and pristine beaches. Due to limited accommodation in the area, Cintsa can't support as many boats and guests as other Sardine Run hotspots, which means you'll enjoy a more personalized experience. Typically, during the Sardine Run, if one boat drops in on a baitball, other boats must wait in a queue, often without time limits for guests. This can result in long waits and even the possibility of missing the action. At Cintsa, you won't need to worry about queuing, which significantly improves your chances of seeing baitballs.

Cintsa is less than an hour away from the East London airport - so, no long transfers!

CANCELLATION POLICIES

ARE THERE REFUNDS?

There are no refunds on deposits or final payments. The reason for this drastic cancellation policy is due to limited space on the boat. Space is reserved on a first-come, first-serve basis, therefore we have turned away potential guests to secure your space. Payments can be held transferrable to another expedition OR the next calendar year, provided there is space available at the time of transfer.

CAN I TRANSFER MY PAYMENTS TO NEXT YEAR?

Yes! All payments can be held for the following years Sardine Run, should you not be able to join us due to unforeseen circumstances. However, there may be additional charges if the price of Sardine Run were to increase the following year.
